

Electronic Death Reporting

It is now possible to report deaths of cattle electronically using CTS Online or some farm software packages. This functionality was introduced in 2010 and is now being used successfully by over 60 slaughterhouses throughout the United Kingdom in addition to this there is a self service telephone channel, where you can report the death of your animal.

A new web service function for software packages has been developed which gives slaughterhouses access to details from CTS of animals presented for slaughter; including full movement histories. This service can also be used by cattle keepers using a farm software package to enable them to get full movement history details for cattle on their holding.

If you use a software package for reporting movements of cattle ask your software provider about an upgrade for the new services.
